The Wrong Rober de Nult. Joshua concluded that a change of might bring a change of luck. So nounced to his wife that he had t Milwaukee for a day or so on hand Mrs Joshus consented nobly, and done Mr. Joshua consented noby, and the up a satebel of clothes, telling him to be sure and not forget his night-shirt when he came, as it was one of half a dozen very nicely embroidered, ruffled, and flutedenes which she had made him in the early days of their affection—they had been married some two months—adding she did not want the set spoiled.

promised, swearing that he would rather lose his head than his night-shirt.

He took the train for Milwaukes and stopped at the Plankington House. He met some of his old chums, who got up a game of draw for him—the only innocent amusement there is in Milwaukee-spent amusement there is in Milwaukee—spena a very pleasant evening, went to bed decorously, and came back next morning. The first thing which Mrs. Joshua did after the affectionate greefing, was to take Joshua's satchel and put the clothes nway. "There!" she exclaimed, "I know it would be just that way." "What's the matter?"

"What's the matter? "Why, you've left your nightshirt acta-all I said about it."

"By George, that's so. But I'll tell you what I'll do my dear. I'll telegraph to the clerk, who is an old friend of mine, and he'll find it under the head of my bed, where the chambermaid will be rure to put it. I'll attend to that at once." Joshua was as good as his word, and the clerk faithful to his old friend-hip. A day or two afterward Joshua got the package from the express office, carried it up to the house without opening it and threw it down before his wife exultingly. "There, I told you they wouldn't go back on me up there. There's the night-shirt safe and sound."

"O' I'm so glad," exclaimed Mrs. Joshus, and she was in earnest.

She proceeded to open the bandle joy-fully, she did open it and found—a woman's nightgown.

It is charitable to draw the curtain over the scene that followed. Joshua swears that "them cusses were playing an infernal joke on him," but he has not yet succeeded in converting his wife to this theory. It is impossible to foretell what the result Purns' First Love.

Burns was born in the year 1759, and began his sentimental career at the age of fifteen, when he was "the most nwkward, ungainly boy in the parish," reading Pope and Shakspeare and Locke, and Tull and Dickson on Agriculture and working hard in the fields. At this time came number one of his recorded loves—a not ungrace-ful picture. And here it may be said that his letters and prose are very re-markable in their free and graphic style, especially in the days of the stilted solem-nities of Doctor Moore and other leading worthies, who were supposed to be models of correct taste. of correct taste.

"You know our country custom of coupling a man and woman together as pariners in the labors of harvest. In my lifteenth autumn my partner was a bewitching creature, a year younger than myself. My scarcity of English denies me the power of doing her justice in that language; but you know the Scottish idiom—she was a bonnic, excet, some lass. In short, she, altogether unwittingly to herself, initiated me in that delicious passion, which, in spite of acid disappointment, gin-house prudence, and book-worm philosophy, I hold to be the first of human joys, our dearest blessing here below. How she caught the contagion I cannot tell. You medical people talk much of infection from breathing the air, the touch, etc. but I never expressly said I loved hor Indeed, I did not know myself why I liked so much to loiter behind with her when returning in the avening from our when returning in the avening from our labor, why the tones of her volce made my heart-strings thrill like an Eclian harp, and particularly why my pulse heat such a furious tattee when I looked and fingered over her little hand to pick out the cruel nettlestings and thistles. Among her other love inspiring qualities, she sung sweetly; and it was her favorite reel to which I attempted giving an em-bodied vehicle in rhyme. I was not bodied vehicle in rhyme. WHAT IS AN EDITOR?-Some one answers this question thus, "Why, he is the man who reads the newspapers, writes man who reads the newspapers, writes articles on any subject, talks to all who cells, is blamed for a hundred things which are nebody's business but his own, helps people to get in office (who forget it afterward), and frequently gets cheated out of half his earnings. He works and does more to build up a town than any other body, and the mises and the fogy are benefited thereby; yet they say that the editor's paper of no account, will not advertise or take the paper, but will borrow it. Who would'nt be an editor!"

DR JOHN BULL CELEBRATED Smith's Tonic SYRUP

CURE OF AGUE AND FEVER Chills and Fover.

THE proprietor of this celebrated medicine in justly claims for it a superiority over all remedies ever offered to the public for the sate, extens, speedy and pressanct erre of Ague and Fever, for Unils and Fever, whether of short or long standing. He refers to the entire Western and Southwestern country to bear him testimony to the truth of the assertion, that in no case whatever will it fail to care, if the directions are strictly followed and carried out. In a great many cases a single dose has been surfacient for a cure, and whole families have been cured by a single bottle, with a perfect restoration of the general health. It is, however, prudent, and in every case more certain to cure, if its use is continued in smaller doses for a week or two after the disease has been checked, more especially in difficult and long standing cases. Usually, this medicine will not require any aid to keep the towels in good order; should the patient, however, require a cathartic medicine, after lawing taken three or four doses of the Tone, a single dose of Hull's Vegetable Family Pills will be sufficient.
